de Brulier was, most excellent as the wily Cardinal. The three musketeers were delightfully portrayed by Leon Barry, George Siegmann and Eugene Pallette. Thomas Holding was Buckingham, whose infatuation for the Queen, played by Mary MacLaren, caused all the trouble. Adolphe Menjou was Louis XIII; Marguerite De La Motte is seen as Constance and Barbara La Marr is Milady, whose subtleties are not equal to D'Artagnan's courage and agility.

The stage settings are by John Wenger and the direction is by Fred Niblo. Although so much has been said of "The Three Musketeers" in advance, we doubt if even the producers had any idea just how big a success it was going to be. Douglas, in his after curtain speech, said that he had no idea, and we, for one, believe him.
